Scene: Chic Cafe - Late Afternoon

**INT. UPSCALE CAFE - BOOTH - LATE AFTERNOON**

The cafe is hushed, tasteful jazz playing softly. JULIAN (40s, sharp suit, impeccably groomed, a smile that doesn't quite reach his eyes, but radiates calm confidence) sips a sparkling water. Across from him sits CHLOE (16, nervous energy, clutching a well-worn purse, clearly out of her depth in this environment). A half-eaten pastry sits forgotten on her plate.

<center>JULIAN</center>

> ...and that's the thing, Chloe. Raw talent like yours? It's rare. Truly rare. Most girls we see, they're beautiful, yes, but they don't have *it*. That spark. That intangible... *something* that just screams high fashion.

Chloe blushes, fiddling with the strap of her purse. Her eyes are wide with a mixture of awe and disbelief.

<center>CHLOE</center>

> I don't know, Mr. Thorne... Julian. My mom always says I'm just dreaming. That these things don't happen to people like us.

<center>JULIAN</center>

> (Leans forward, voice soft, earnest)

> And that's precisely why it *does* happen, Chloe. Because you *are* dreaming. You have the vision. Your mother, bless her heart, she's protecting you. She's thinking small, safe. But we're talking about a global stage here. Paris, Milan, New York. We're talking about *your* future.

He pauses, letting the words hang in the air, watching her reaction.

<center>JULIAN (CONT'D)</center>

> Now, to make this happen, to truly fast-track you into our exclusive development program, there are a few practicalities. Small steps now that lead to giant leaps later.

<center>CHLOE</center>

> Like what? The photoshoot next week? I've already told my mom about that. She said she'd drive me.

<center>JULIAN</center>

> (A gentle, reassuring smile)

> The photoshoot is just the very first brushstroke, my dear. We're talking about building your entire portfolio, preparing you for international travel, securing your visa for our European launch. And for all of that, the first, most crucial step is your passport.

He gestures vaguely to an unseen form in his briefcase.

<center>CHLOE</center>

> My passport? Why? I've never needed it for anything here.

<center>JULIAN</center>

> (Patiently, as if explaining to a child)

> Think of it like this, Chloe. When you join a professional team, whether it's an Olympic athlete or a top-tier model, your management handles the logistics. We need to secure your international travel documents, register you with the necessary overseas agencies, ensure everything is perfectly aligned for when the opportunity strikes - and it strikes fast in this industry. Having your passport with us, securely in the agency vault, means we can move at lightning speed. No delays. No missed deadlines. It shows *us* you're serious, and it shows the *world* you're ready.

He reaches into his inner jacket pocket, pulling out a sleek leather wallet.

<center>JULIAN (CONT'D)</center>

> We're talking about an investment, Chloe. An investment in *you*. And we need to ensure all the pieces are in place. For your safety, for your convenience, for your career. It's standard practice in high-level talent management.

Chloe hesitates, her gaze drifting to her half-eaten pastry.

<center>CHLOE</center>

> But... my parents. They'll need to know. What if they want to see it?

<center>JULIAN</center>

> (His voice drops slightly, becoming more intimate, conspiratorial)
> This brings me to the next, equally important, point. Your parents. They love you, Chloe, I have no doubt. But sometimes, well-meaning love can become... a distraction. An anchor, when you need to fly.

Chloe looks up, puzzled.

<center>CHLOE</center>

> A distraction?

<center>JULIAN</center>

> (Nods slowly, his expression full of understanding)
> Think about the level of focus this career demands. The discipline. The absolute immersion. For these crucial first few weeks - the period where we're shaping your image, intense training, working with top photographers, preparing you for those crucial first castings - you need to be entirely present. Undistracted.

<center>CHLOE</center>

> So... I can't call them?

<center>JULIAN</center>

> (A gentle, comforting hand briefly touches her arm)
> Not *can't*, my dear. It's more a matter of *shouldn't*, for this brief, vital window. Imagine you're in a high-stakes meeting, or on a critical set, and your phone rings with a worried parent asking if you've eaten enough, or if you're homesick. It breaks the illusion. It signals to the industry that you're not fully autonomous, not fully committed. And frankly, it undermines *your* confidence.

He withdraws his hand, resuming his calm, collected posture.

<center>JULIAN (CONT'D)</center>

> We want you to emerge from these few weeks a transformed young woman. Confident, poised, fully immersed in your new identity. And sometimes, that requires a brief, professional period of... what we call "total focus." It's not about cutting them out, Chloe. It's about demonstrating your absolute dedication to this opportunity. To *your* opportunity.

He leans back, allowing her to process this. His expression is serene, almost paternal.

<center>JULIAN (CONT'D)</center>

> We'll be in constant contact with *you*. You'll have access to our team 24/7. You won't be alone. It's just about managing external perceptions for a critical few weeks. Then, once you've proven yourself, once the initial groundwork is laid, and you've secured your first major bookings, *then* you can call them, share the incredible news. Imagine their pride then. Their relief. You won't just be telling them you *might* be a model; you'll be telling them you *are* one. A professional.

He smiles warmly.

<center>JULIAN (CONT'D)</center>

> It's a small sacrifice for an extraordinary future, Chloe. A few weeks of intense focus, without the well-meaning distractions, to build a foundation that will last a lifetime. Are you ready to make that commitment to yourself? To this future?

Chloe looks from Julian's confident, reassuring face to the imaginary world he's painted. Her hand slowly moves to her purse, fingers brushing against the leather. The internal conflict is clear, but the allure of the dream is powerful.

<center>CHLOE</center>

> A few weeks... and then I can call them?

<center>JULIAN</center>

> (Beaming, a hint of triumph in his eyes)

> Absolutely. And by then, you'll have such incredible news to share. So, Chloe. The passport? And the promise of absolute focus? It's your decision. And your future.

He reaches his hand across the table, open and inviting. Chloe's gaze drifts one last time to her pastry, then slowly, with a deep, shaky breath, she begins to open her purse.
